

MOKENA TO HAVE $70,000 SEWER THIS YEAR

Mokena is going to have a sewer system costing $70,000. The Local Board of Improvements after the public hearing held last Friday evening, voted to go thru with the measure.

The hearing was called at the village hall, but as the large number of taxpayers and property owners present taxed the capacity of the hall, the meeting was adjourned and reconvened at the school auditorium. Alderman Ona McGovney gave a brief outline of the various plans the board has been considering for sewer disposal the past three years and the adoption of the present sanitary sewer system as now planned. Mr. Cathers the village engineer gave an outline of the various types of sewers being installed and what the state requirements are. He stated that the estimated cost of the sewer will be $2.25 per running foot to be paid by special assessment over a period of twenty years with interest at 6 per cent.

A group of property owners who are opposed to the sewer touched off the fireworks when they said the cost was excessive and that many of the poor small home owners would not be able to meet the assessments and as a result would be in danger of losing their property. The air was filled with charges of steam roller methods, minority rule, liar, etc. The meeting ended in a riot of words and heated arguments following which the local board of improvements resumed their session and voted the adoption of the sewer system.

Alderman McGovney said that he had heard that charges of graft were being made, and pointed out that the charges were absurd and impossible.

The property owners opposed to the sewer are planning to fight the project in county court.

Dog Steals Meat Is Ordered Shot

Complaints have been lodged with the Mokena village board that a number of stray dogs are proving a nuisance in town, scaring children and even getting after the grownups. One dog was reported as being a regular thief. He makes the rounds of back porches and has stolen quite a number of Sunday dinners.

At a meeting of the village board on Wednesday night, orders were issued that efforts be made to find the owner of the dogs and if there is no owner then the dogs are to be shot.

ROAD HOGS KILL MAN AT NEW LENOX

Walter Ohlendorf, 40 years old, of Crete, an implement salesman, suffered fatal injuries Sunday afternoon when an automobile which he was driving overturned in a ditch on the road near New Lenox. Ohlendorf was attempting to avoid a collision with two cars approaching from Joliet and his machine left the pavement, turning a complete somersault.

The motorist suffered a broken neck and died at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning in Silver Cross hospital. The accident occurred about 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon while Ohlendorf was enroute to Joliet.

According to Ohlendorf's story of the accident, told before he lost consciousness, he was driving to Joliet and just west of New Lenox two automobiles approached from the west. They were abreast on the road trying to pass each other. Seeing that a collision appeared inevitable Ohlendorf said that he swerved his machine from the pavement. It rolled completely over. The two machines did not stop continuing to speed toward New Lenox.

Three young men who were passing the scene of the accident took Mr. Ohlendorf to the Silver Cross hospital. An examination by Dr. D. W. Killinger revealed that the man's neck had been fractured. Shock and injuries caused Mr. Ohlendorf to relapse into a state of coma soon after he arrived in the hospital. He died at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning without regaining consciousness. He told his brother Carl Ohlendorf how the accident occurred before he became unconscious.

Sheriff A. E. Markgraf went to the scene of the accident Sunday afternoon in an effort to learn some of the details. An inquiry is being continued in an attempt to learn the identity of the other motorists. Mr. Ohlendorf was the ninth victim of auto accidents to die in Will county since January 1.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Ohlendorf of Crete; 3 sisters, Agnes and Ella of Crete, and Mrs. Ida Rust of Beecher and 4 brothers, Carl, Fred, Lawrence, Herbert and Edgar Ohlendorf.

Following the program tea was served in the parlor which was radiant with Spring flowers as was the club room. Mrs. Frank Nichols was hostess.

McCarney In Representative Race

Aloysius B. McCarney of Joliet, better known as "Barney" McCarney, is a candidate for state representative and his name is familiar to the voters of Mokena as he was the first man to hold a public meeting in Mokena and expose the jokers in the proposed state constitutional amendment a few years ago. He was largely instrumental in contributing to the defeat of the measure in Will County. This measure was not in favor of the poor man.

Mr. McCarney would be the right man to represent the small home owner and farmer in the legislature and his 18 years of experience in legislative work will be a valuable asset. Let us give "Barney" a real vote support.

WHO IARES?

What do we care, if the wind does blow,
And piles our road-ways full of snow,
We're still working hard for the FLOWER SHOW,
And it's going to be great, so let's ALL GO!

T.N.S.
The Garden Club members gathered at the attractive home of Mrs. Henry Brueggemann last Friday afternoon at two o'clock to hold the regular monthly meeting. There was a large attendance. Chairmen of the different committees in charge of entries to be exhibited at the Central States Garden and Flower Show, made reports to Mrs. Wm. Funk, chairman in charge. Mrs. Kehres gave a very interesting short talk on "My Favorite Flowers (Pansy) and How I Grow Them". Hot cocoa, delicious home made cake and cookies was served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter Miss Agnes Brueggemann.

With the sunshine bringing a sheen to the lawns, lilac buds swelling and Spring scheduled to start officially next Friday, thoits of Illinois thousands of garden lovers are turning toward their flowers and lawns, but the busiest of this group are the members of the 92 garden clubs who are completing their preparations for the Central States Garden and Flower Show, which opens on April 5th at the Chicago Stadium, under the auspices of the Garden Club of Illinois.

Not to be outdone by the Chicago park gardens, those of the big commercial growers, horticultural societies, estate owners and others which will occupy the 40,000 feet of the Stadium's main floor, the garden clubs will be represented by an array of beautiful and artistic displays in the many competitive classes open to them.

These will be displayed on the terraces which are being built entirely around and overlooking the floor of the Stadium and which will afford ample room both for the exhibits and for the spectators, as well as a magnificent view of the panorama of full size gardens below.

The miniature models of a house and garden, showing what can be done with the grounds of a small suburban home, will be displayed by many garden clubs and great ingenuity, a sound knowledge of landscaping and utilization of space is apparent in the models already completed. This class will develop keen competition and visitors to the show will gain valuable ideas for their own home gardens.

This Citizen Voices Warning Against Sewer Project

The News-Bulletin has been requested to give space to the following letter regarding the new sewer of Mokena, written by an opponent.

To the property owners of the Village of Mokena:

Now is the time to take notice and get busy. The Village Board of Mokena now has the blue prints of the sanitary sewer system which they intend to lay thru the village north and south, east and west. They tell us that this system is to take no surface water, and that it will be a sealed sewer only for cellar and sink drains and house toilets and that the raw sewage can be run right into the sewer without using a septic tank. This means you won't need a septic tank when the sewer is installed. Right here is a point I wish to call attention too.

The greasy sink water, soapy cellar drain water will all run into the sewer. These two are the worst sewer cloggers known. When this kind of sewage enters the sewer it has a tendency to make the tile gummy and sticky if there is not a steady stream of water flowing thru the sewer. This gummy and greasy substance will get rubber like and adhere to the bottom of the sewer.

This is not just a saying, it is a fact. Now comes the toilet sewerage which is run untreated into the sewer with a water flush of only 5 gallons of water. How is this small amount of water going to carry this sewage one mile thru the sewer to the outlet? If there were 6,000 people living in this town and the toilets were used frequently or a steady stream of water flowed thru the sewer it would have no chance to become clogged. The steady stream would carry it thru to the outlet. Again, if you have a three chamber sanitary septic tank, there is no need of a sewer of this kind. This tank is sanitary in all shapes and forms if you build the right kind, you can run its waste water anywhere for the water which comes from this tank is as clean as the water pumped out of a well. It has no odor. These tanks cost $70 and everybody can afford them, but they cannot all afford the price of the sewer.

There is property in this town which will not be benefited by this sewer because there are no improvements on this property.

I grant that there are a few people in town who need this sewer because they built on low land or dug their basements too deep. We feel sorry for them. But do they think it is right to burden the entire Village of Mokena with a seventy thousand dollar sewer, yes, it may even cost a hundred thousand before it is finished. Now if this sewer clogs which is sure to happen unless there is a steady stream of water flowing thru, how are you going to find out where it is blocked? Will leave that for the city dads to answer.

It is not always said that the engineers and architects know it all.

There are many instances where they are wrong. It is experience which teaches more than any thing else. The sewer engineer claims the sewer will not block or clog. The Mokena school architect claimed that the school basement did not need tile around the bottom of it. He was very certain that no water would go down thru the hard clay. He was told by men of 40 years of experience in this kind of work that if no tile was laid around the bottom on the outside of the wall the basement would be damp and wet. The architect insisted this was not necessary. What happened? After the building was finished and spring was at hand we got a little rain and these nice little rains seaped down along the walls and got down into the basement floor resulting in water and dampness. What could be done? It was found that tile would have to be laid around these walls, which was done and in a short time the basement was dried out so the floor could be laid.

You can see all this money that was paid out to do this tiling could have been saved had the tile been laid before the walls were up. So you see the architect's foresight was poor. He did not realize that the heavy rains would splash up against the building and follow the wall down to the bottom and then thru into the basement floor. That's why the tile are laid around the bottom on the outside of the wall to catch the water that seeps down along the walls. Believe it or not! We hear talk about improving the town. Sure that is all right, but start improving right and do some thing that is worth while. What improvements did we get the past few years for the big amount of money that was spent on Front street at a cost of about $8,000 for "paving" it? What have we got? Nothing. Instead had the street been cut down to the rock bottom that is about 15 inches thick and laid from the old school house west to the other end of town, a good roadway would have been secured. However, more material was put on top so that the center of the street is almost two feet higher in some places than the sidewalks. When it rains the water makes the side walks the gutters. The city dads were told when they were "paving" the street that it would not last. You can't roll marbles and make them pack so they will stay in place.

Country Snow Bound By Worst Blizzard Of Entire Season

The country is just beginning to dig itself out of the worst snow storm of this winter and for that matter of several winters. The blizzard started late Monday night and accompanied by a 60 mile an hour gale continued until Wednesday afternoon with the result that the country was pretty well snow bound and some of the country roads are so badly blocked that they will not be open for weeks.

Snow plows and a gang of men were at work Wednesday morning opening 143rd street, thru Orland, Oak Park avenue and 183rd street at Tinley Park, Wolf Road and R51 near Mokena and the Lincoln highway at Frankfort and New Lenox.

Frankfort was cut off entirely as the result of the Lincoln highway being blocked. No bus service was possible and the mail was delayed.

A number of cars were caught in the storm and were abandoned along the highway. Even the snow plows were stalled at times.

A snow plow outfit tipped over into a ditch along 183rd street south of Tinley Park Wednesday morning.

Harry Liliwitz was obliged to abandon his auto on the Schilling road north of Mokena when it became stalled in a snow drift. The car was completely buried in the snow in a few hours.

While Fred Cappel of Mokena was trying to deliver a truck load of coal to New Lenox Tuesday morning the truck got stuck in a deep drift near the Butler farm, and had to be abandoned.

The rural mail carriers have not been able to make their rounds and the rural patrons have to call at the post offices to get their mail. The highways are blocked with drifts all the way from 3 to 10 feet deep.

The milk trucks have been unable to collect the milk and the dairy men have had to bring it to Mokena for shipment to Chicago by train.

Many of the country schools were closed as the pupils and teachers were unable to get to them on account of the impassable roads.

The Rock Island had gangs of section men working nearly all night Tuesday keeping the switches open.

Mayor H. Mall Names Mokena Election Officials

The following election officials for the Mokena village election, Tuesday April 15th were appointed by Mayor Harry F. Mall at the council meeting Wednesday evening: Judges: E. P. Krapp, W. C. Schuhl, J. W. Mattes; clerks Don C. Hall, Jr., and Geo. Knudson.

for it can't be done. Nor can you build a street with round gravel stones and make it hold unless you use a mixture of cement which means concrete. Take notice, cut down the front street to the rock where it belongs and then with a little covering it will be as good as any street in the country and no more water will overrun the sidewalks. Then you will have done something worth while. Stop and think. Start right and you will end right.

VILLAGE CITIZEN

FORMER MOKENA MAN FIGURES IN FAMOUS CASE

The following clipping from a California paper is of special interest as it concerns one of Mokena's former residents, Attorney A. W. McGovney:

A vivid cross shaped scar on the little finger of her left hand today seems as the clue upon which Mrs. Edna C. Stiles of Pasadena, hopes to solve the mystery of her parentage and make her heirs to the $2,000,000 estate of Gaby Deslys, noted French dancer, who died two years ago.

Evidence gathered by Judge A. W. McGovney of Gardena, a Los Angeles suburb, indicates that Mrs. Stiles is the daughter of the dancer. Claims intended to prove the Pasadena woman's right to a part of the Deslys fortune have been forwarded to the Paris, France, Courts where the estate now is in the process of settlement.

Mrs. Stiles, adopted daughter of Mrs. Edna L. Miltner of Pasadena long has sought information regarding the identity of her parents or of the mysterious man who in 1885 placed her in a Peoria, Ill., foundling home. She also has been puzzled over the vivid scar, apparently intentionally inflicted, which mars her finger.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Stiles received thru the mail an envelope containing a clipping from a San Francisco newspaper giving details of the Deslys will case. The newspaper account contained portions of the testimony of an aged French nurse, who testified that the dancer had given birth secretly many years ago to a baby girl.

In her testimony the nurse said a few hours after the baby was born she cut a cross into the flesh of the little finger of the child's left hand for purposes of future identification.

"I believe we can prove," Judge McGovney said, "that Gaby Deslys when a girl of 16 or 18 years, gave birth to a baby girl somewhere near Chicago in 1885. We have documentary proof that this baby was Mrs. Stiles, and believe we can prove that she is the daughter of the famous dancer."

Wolf Road Bridge Letting This Saturday

The contracts for the construction of two bridges on Wolf road, one south and one north of Mokena will be let this Saturday morning by the Will county bond issue committee at the court house in Joliet. Mr. Fletcher, the county engineer advises that right of way is to be secured for the bridge sites and that the right of way committee has the papers, but that the bridge contracts will be awarded first and the right of way secured afterward. Mr. Fletcher also advises that the plans for the paving of one mile thru the C. M. Cleveland farm south of Mokena have been finished and have been forwarded to the state highway department for final approval.

BOUQUETS FOR EVENING GOWNS; GORGEOUS FLOWERED CHIFFONS

ACCORDING to recent couture openings it would seem that fashion intends to "throw bouquets" at us this spring and summer. A welcome gesture this, on the part of the mode, and one which will be received roll-hemmed organdie fastens under large flowers made of the self-same pique or organdie. Chanel puts pique flowers on organdie party frocks. Several French milliners are sending over flowered hats, such as for with rejoicing throughout vanity fair, for there is no adornment which lends a more flattering note to the costume of woman-beautiful than that of lovely flower accessories.

In this new program of flowers, accent is placed not only on the formal evening corsage but the pretty custom of wearing boutonnières in the daytime is also being revived.

The outstanding feature in regard to artificial flowers for evening costume is their artful placement. Note, for example, the ingenious positioning of a cluster of lavender nasturtiums placed at the hipline of the exquisite sunburn satin evening gown in the picture.

Another very new idea and one increasingly favored is the outlining of the neckline with artificial flowers, or of forming narrow necklaces of wee posies to hold up the décolleté.

Flowers also play a picturesque part in creating attractive back views such as distinguish most evening gowns. Often the floral monture is posed at the low point of the décolleté at the back, or else it trails softly from the instance a large rose placed on the underbrim.

Indeed, it seems the couturier and modistes have joined forces with Mother Nature and are producing a flowery spring and summer season.

Enchanting Flowered Chiffons.

No artist could create with paint and brush lovelier effects than the patternings of the new flowered chiffons. Designs are that cleverly reproduced in filmy weaves they often give the impression of exquisite hand water-coloring.

Evening and dressy afternoon frocks glory in the gorgeous colorings and striking patternings of the chiffons of which they are made. The afternoon gown in the lower picture is in one of the new authentic print flower patternings. The design artfully reproduces a water-color effect.

There is a refreshing note about the new chiffons which glory in huge motifs in brilliant hues, often against dark backgrounds as instanced in the model illustrated. Then, too, the list of bold striking patternings include chiffons with life-size tulips printed thereon, or immense trailing roses in realistic colorings. Contrasting these bizarre motifs are the very chic and charming directoire prints which scatter little bouquets in conventional spacing. It might be well to say, speaking of prints, that the new and very smart taffetas are patterned quite after the order of modern chiffons.

Fashion assigns to sleeves this season a star role. The new sleeves breathe of the romance and picturesqueness of other days, reviving as they have such quaint, pretty old-fashioned types as short puffs, caps, and that which bespeaks infinite grace—the three-quarter sleeve whose flaring circular ruffle is especially effective when developed in sheer, diaphanous fabrics, such as is employed for the lovely gown which is herewith portrayed.

There is no doubt about it, and the picture confirms the fact, modes for afternoon and evening wear have gone utterly feminine. Soft bows, flounces, intricate drapings, in fact, all the frolic and flutter effects of the days "when knighthood was in flower" are revived in the picture of fashion as presented by 1930 spring and summer modes.

When garden walks and all the grassy floor
With blossoms red and white of fallen May
And chestnut flowers are strewn—
So have I heard the cuckoo's parting cry
From the wet field, through the vest garden trees
Come with the volleying rain and tossing breeze.

THIS AND THAT

The serving of a good soup at the beginning of the meal will save on the meat bill and also on the health. One is easily satisfied with a simple meal after being served with a soup of creamed vegetable. A light dessert or a bit of cheese and fruit makes a most satisfying finish to a meal.

When serving a clear soup a few little yellow balls of egg added to it gives the color and adds to the calories. Prepare them as follows: Take two hard cooked yolks of eggs and mix with the raw white of one, the paste, then form into balls like marbles. A little seasoning should be added. These, two or three to a plate of soup, will take the place of croutons for a change.

When the gardens are made this spring have a few feet for some of the savory herbs, so good in seasoning, as well as greens for garnishing. Chikory, chervil, parsley and mint are only a few. One's own sage tastes so much better than that which has been put away in boxes. Pepper grass, black mustard for greens, are all easily grown. Tarragon is used to flavor vinegar, but, when fresh, adds flavor to many dishes.

Maitre d' Hotel Potatoes.—Cut cold potatoes (underdone) into thick slices. Add a tablespoonful of flour to the same of butter and cook with a cupful of broth. When boiling add the potatoes and a tablespoonful of minced parsley and pepper and salt to taste. Cook for a few minutes; then add the yolk of an egg beaten with a teaspoonful of cold water and a little lemon juice. When the egg is thickened, turn out on a hot dish and serve.

Salad de Laitue.—Select firm, crisp lettuce; remove the coarser outer leaves; wash and drain well. Place in a salad bowl with one tablespoonful of chopped chives, one-half teaspoonful each of chervil and tarragon. Season with salt and pepper, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and three tablespoonfuls of oil. Mix thoroughly and serve.

COOKERY HINTS

The American cook has a wider range of foods at his command than any other in the world, yet the bugbear of cookery is monotony. Foods served in the same way day after day, or on the same day of the week, week in and week out, "become flat, stale and unprofitable." Every one likes a change; change of scene, change of occupation and change of food are necessary to keep up life's interest.

Much of our cooking is like sheep leading sheep—an unthinking process. We prepare the foods that our mothers did; and die of stomach trouble. When eggs were ten cents a dozen and butter fifteen and twenty cents a pound, the free use of them was not criticized in cookery. But in this day of high prices much economy can be practiced without giving up expensive foods, such as eggs, butter and meat. Small amounts of different meats will season a large dish of vegetables, making a most satisfying meal at little cost. The flavor of the meat enters into the food and makes it tasty; then, with good seasoning and tasty serving, the dish is a success.

We may learn much from the French chefs who depend upon delighting the eye as well as the palate and use hundreds of ways of serving the same food. They are economical as well as resourceful and with their unflinching variety, most successful cooks.

We might not enjoy the fat and juicy snails which the French so enjoy and we are not yet accustomed to sparrow pie, though most savory they tell us, yet we may learn much from the French in the matter of sauces and seasoning to add variety to our diet.

There are hundreds of ways, for example, to serve common potatoes, but how many cooks in the American home know even twenty ways to serve them?

The memory of a dish of fresh shrimps served in Madame Beques in New Orleans will be a lasting one. The shrimps were fresh and pink and plump, served on curled lettuce with a simple french dressing to which a dash of Worcestershire sauce was added. French bread in great wedges, served on a napkin-covered silver tray, was passed with the salad. The taste of that bread and sweet, fresh butter is written in her guest books by the thousands who have enjoyed her breakfasts and dinners.

Radio Playlet,

"Romance of the West"

The Lincoln Country War, a bitter factional fight in New Mexico in the early seventies, is the background for the Conoco Adventurers' radio playlet of the western country.

Billy the Kid, one of the most famous outlaws of the Old West, who, when he was still a beardless youth of eighteen, carried several notches on his gun, is one of the principal characters in the radio playlet, "A Romance of the West." It tells the story of the three days of continuous battle which finally ended a bitter factional strife centering around the town of Lincoln. There is woven into the sketch an interesting love story, illuminated by the chronicle of the bravery of a settler's daughter, who is finally won by one of the participants in the "Lincoln County War."

Special musical effects have been devised to lend a convincing sound background to the action, and there is a touch of comedy, too, in the character of the pioneer wife who owned the only piano for miles around, and was ready to defend it with her life.

The Conoco Adventurers may be heard each Thursday at 10 p. m., CST, over the NBC network.

PUT THE KETTLE ON
 when you need hot water?

The tea-kettle, singing away by itself on the kitchen stove, used to be the only source of hot water. But that was years ago. Modern homes have the self-acting water heater to give them all the hot water they want — the instant a faucet is turned. Stored up in a specially-insulated tank, ready for use at all times, is enough hot water for several full-to-the-brim baths, for doing hundreds of dishes, for scrubbing an acre of floors, for shaving almost an army of men.

ONLY $5.00 down puts a "Pittsburgh" self-acting gas-fired hot water heater in your basement. Pay the balance (plus a nominal carrying charge) monthly with your regular service statement. The cash price is $69.75 (24 gallon tank), installation extra. One of our representatives will gladly call and tell you all about this delightful hot water service. Phone your Public Service Store.

CAN VOTE FOR 2 CANDIDATES FOR ASSEMBLY

Republican voters in the April primary will be permitted to cast their ballots for only two candidates for state representative, while democratic voters will be limited to one candidate, according to a ruling by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom.

In previous primary elections, republican voters have voted for one, two or three candidates. When one candidate was voted for, it counted as three votes; when two candidates were voted for, a vote and a half each, and three candidates, one vote each.

Under Attorney General Carlstrom's interpretation of the law, however, a voter may give three votes to one candidate or a vote and a half to each of two candidates. No longer is it possible to give a vote to each of three candidates.

The reason for this change is that the senatorial committee of the republican party decided recently that only the names of two candidates for representative from the primary election would be certified to run in the election next fall; while the democratic senatorial committee agreed that only one candidate of that party would be certified for election.

Action of the two senatorial committees was brought to the attorney general's attention and an interpretation asked. In his opinion, Mr. Carlstrom said that inasmuch as the republican committee would certify only two candidates, the party voters at the primary election April 8th would have to confine their choice to not more than two candidates; and that the democratic voters would be limited to one candidate.

At the last primary election many republican voters marked crosses after the names of three candidates for state representative. At the coming election they will be able to vote for only two, each receiving a vote and a half. If only one candidate is voted for, however, the vote will be counted as three.

In the democratic primary, in which two candidates are seeking nomination as state representative, voters will cast their ballot for only one of the two candidates, according to the attorney general's ruling.

Following is the opinion handed down by Mr. Carlstrom:

"(1) If the senatorial committee of a political party has determined that there shall be three candidates of that party for representative in the general assembly, then a qualified primary elector of that party has a right to cast three votes for one candidate, or distribute his 3 votes among two or three candidates. Of course the elector may write in the name of a candidate or candidates on the ballot, but he may not distribute his three votes among more than three persons.

"(2) If the senatorial committee of a political party has determined that there shall be two candidates of that party for representative in the general assembly, then a qualified primary elector of that party has a right to cast three votes for one candidate or distribute his three votes between only two candidates. The elector may write in the name of a candidate or candidates on the ballot but may not distribute his 3 votes between more than two persons.

"(3) If the senatorial committee of a political party has determined that there shall be only one candidate of that party for representative in the general assembly, then a qualified primary elector of that party can cast his three votes for only one candidate. The elector may write in the name of a candidate on the ballot, but he can vote for only one person and no more.

"(4) If the senatorial committee of a political party has failed to take any action with respect to the number of candidates for representative in the general assembly to be nominated by that party at the primary election, then a qualified primary elector of that party has a right to cast three votes for one candidate, or distribute his three votes among two or three candidates. The elector may write in the name of a candidate or candidates on the ballot but he may not distribute his three votes among more than three persons.

"From a consideration of the foregoing, it is important that on both the specimen and official ballots the directions to the voters which are printed below the name of the office of representative in the general assembly, as required by section nine of the Legislative Primary Act, should conform to the existing facts in the respective senatorial districts. If the senatorial committee of any political party in any senatorial district has determined that there shall be three candidates of that party for representative in the general assembly, or if the committee has failed to take any action with respect to the number of candidates to be nominated the directions on the ballot printed below the name of the office of representative in the general assembly should read, 'Vote for one, two or three; if the committee has determined only two candidates, said direction should read, 'Vote for one or two'; and if the committee has determined upon only one candidate, the said directions should read 'Vote for one.'"

BUSINESS-LIKE ADMINISTRATION FLINT'S PLEDGE

A business-like administration conducted in an honest and efficient manner, that is the pledge of Oliver Flint, candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff at the April primaries.

Thruout his long business and political career Mr. Flint's ability and integrity could never be honestly questioned. Any position he filled, whether it was executive of the Flint Sanitary Milk Company, alderman, superintendent of streets or supervisor, was filled with marked ability and integrity. And such will be true in the event he is elected to the office of sheriff.

Voters of Will County can support Mr. Flint for the sheriff's office on the assurance that he will render creditable service in that responsible office. He is honest, efficient, capable, upright. No better adjectives can be supplied to an aspirant for a county office.

If elected, Mr. Flint states that he will at once form an experienced and efficient corps of deputy sheriffs and jailors to conduct the affairs of the sheriff's office in a manner which will assure all persons in Will County adequate protection of their lives and property at all times.

Ripe All Year 'Round

TIME was when people had to subsist during the winter months on a diet of poor quality. But that was a generation or two ago. Nowadays vegetables of excellent quality, picked at their moment of prime ripeness, are available in cans to anyone at any time of the year.

Take tomatoes, for instance. It is scarcely conceivable to us now that there was a time not so long ago when these succulent vegetables were not to be had for love or money in the Northern States during the cold winter months. Our principal difficulty now is to decide in which of many delicious ways we will cook and serve them.

New Tomato Recipe

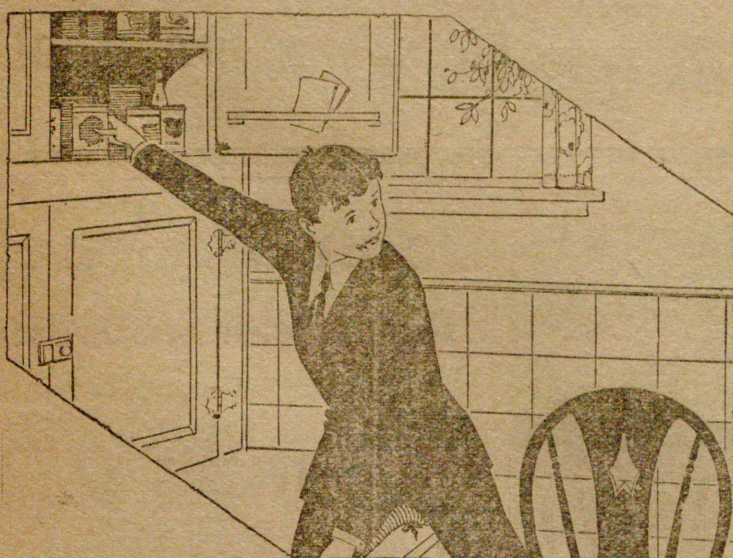

Here are two new recipes on which you can't go wrong—one for combining tomatoes with other vegetables, and one for using them in a salad dressing.

Pea and Rice Goulash: Dice two slices bacon and fry crisp. Remove bacon from fire. Chop one onion and add to the bacon fat, cooking gently until pale yellow. Add the contents of one 10-ounce can of strained tomatoes, one cup boiling water and the liquor from one 11-ounce can of peas, and bring to boiling. Add one-fourth cup brown rice and cook till the rice is tender, about 35 minutes. Add the peas, beat well, add cooked bacon and serve. This serves four.

Thousand Island Dressing: Mix together one cup mayonnaise, three tablespoons canned tomato paste, one tablespoon chopped green pepper and ten chopped stuffed olives. Serve on hearts of lettuce.*

Count Your Cans

CHARITY in this country assumes a hundred different guises, but it has remained for Rochester, N. Y., to bring about a situation in which it was wise for the careful housewife to count the cans on her kitchen shelves. Not that a Rochester housewife minded very much if she found one missing, because she knew that it had probably gone for a charitable object.

It was the Picadilly Theater in Rochester which invented this new kind of charity. Its managers announced that on a certain Wednesday close to Christmas they would give a practically free matinee for children. The only proviso was that each child should bring some sort of canned food which was to be distributed among the needy during the holiday season. All that was necessary, they said, for any child to see and hear their latest

Box Office Swamped

There were some puzzled mothers in Rochester that Wednesday night, many delighted children, and also many grateful people among the poverty stricken. For the first time in its experience, the Picadilly Theater faced the situation of having to enlarge its box office if that cubicle were to contain all of that matinee's receipts. Instead of that, they stacked them anywhere they could. This new kind of charity proved such a success that it would not be surprising to see it repeated there and instituted elsewhere next year.*

Protect Rural Communities Says Ames in Sheriff Race

"Rural communities in Cook County have proved in the past to be the dumping grounds of Chicago's criminal refuse," declared Major Carlos Ames, Republican candidate for Sheriff, in preparing the itinerary for the final drive of his country-town friends for the last ten days of the primary campaign now in progress.

"Republican voters in the wide belt of country towns encircling Chicago should consider the necessity of having law-enforcement officials who will protect our citizens, not by word of mouth but by actual activity. If no other thing is done on April 8 every Republican voter should go to the polls and cast his vote for the office of Sheriff."

"Action is the keynote of my campaign and instead of issuing wordy statements I shall devote my term in office, if I receive the majority vote, pending the nomination, to safeguarding and protecting the residents of all Cook County communities, which in my estimation is one of the primary functions of the office of Sheriff."

Major Carlos Ames, a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, and the outstanding Republican candidate for the office of Sheriff last week issued his platform to the press. Embodied in this platform are two planks which deal directly with rural communities and country towns. These planks are:

1. Safeguard public highways by rigid adherence to this principle, the abatement of crime will go on apace with the progress attained in other large cities and counties, as a close outlook being maintained over the arterial highways 24 hours a day will assist local authorities in the apprehension of criminals.

2. Protection of rural communities. A primary function of the Sheriff's office with special stress laid on rural protection will tend to eliminate numerous crimes that would otherwise be committed unless rigid surveillance would be maintained by the Sheriff's staff.

Major Ames, not having pledged himself to any group that condones privilege, pillage and barter with crime, is prepared to conduct the office of Sheriff in a manner that will help all Cook County keep its name cleared.

VOTE FOR ALOYSIUS B. MCCARNEY REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR State Senator OF THE 41st District

Comprising Will and DuPage Counties.

A man many of the readers of the News-Bulletin may recall as one of the first men in Will County who very ably pointed out the dangers that were incorporated in the proposed Constitution in 1923 and helped bring about its defeat. He is now seeking the support of the people of the 41st Senatorial District as a candidate for the general assembly.

In order that he can use his 18 years of experience as Legislative Representative of the B. of L. E. & E. in order to help protect the interests of the people in their efforts to get relief from the tax burden that confronts the farmer and small home owner of today. This district needs such a man at this time. As you are going to have an opportunity to vote by a referendum vote an amendment to the revenue section of the constitution of the state of Illinois, this referendum will grant the right to the general assembly to revise the method of taxation now in vogue under the old state constitution.

By voting for Aloysius B. McCarney you assure yourself of the man who can be depended upon to protect your interests as above stated.

THE MONEYLESS MAN.

Is there no secret place on the face of this earth,
Where charity dwelleth, where virtue hath birth;
Is there no place where a knock from the poor
Will bring a kind angel to open the door
Where bosoms in kindness and mercy will heave,
And the poor and the wretched will ask and receive?
Ah! search this wide world, wherever you can,
There is no open door for the moneyless man.

Go to yon church, with its tall reaching spire,
Which gives back to the sun its same look of red fire;
Where the columns and arches are gorgeous within,
And the walls seem as pure as a soul without sin;
Walk up the aisles, see the rich and the great,
In the pride and the pomp of their worldly estate;
Walk down in your patches and find if you can
Who opens his pew to the moneyless man.

Then go to the judge is his dark flowing gows,
With the scales wherein law weigheth equity down;
Where he frowns on the weak and smiles on the strong,
And punishes right, while he justifies wrong.
Where jurors their lips on the Bible have laid
To render a verdict they've already made.
Go there in the courtroom and find, if you can,
Any law for the cause of the moneyless man.

Then go to the bank where mammon has told
His hundreds and thousands of silver and gold;
Where safe from the hands of the starving and poor,
Lies pile upon pile of the glittering ore.
Walk up to the counter—Ah! there you may stay
Till your limbs grow old and your hairs turn grey;
And you'll find at the bank not one of the clan
With money to loan to the moneyless man.

Then go to your hovel—no raven hath fed
The wife who has suffered too long for her bread;
Kneel down by her pallet and kiss the death frost
From the lips of the angel your poverty lost.
And turn in your agony upward to God
And bless, while it smites you, the chastening rod—
And you'll find at the end of Life's little span
There's a home—up above—for the moneyless man.

Searching for new weapons with which to combat diseases, the state department of health, co-operating with the medical college of the state university, has launched an extensive program of research, Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, has announced. Two dozen definite research projects are already under way, he said. The work is under the supervision of Dr. Lloyd Arnold, head of the Chicago branch of the state diagnostic laboratory and faculty member of the medical college of the university.

The state department of conservation, Director Ralph F. Bradford has announced, will attempt to rear wild turkey on the newly acquired state forest in Union county. A five acre patch of woodland is being fenced off as a rearing field for several pair of turkeys. Other development work in the state forest, Mr. Bradford said, is well under way. Roads are being improved, the water supply is being developed and old fields are being cultivated to be used as nurseries for forest trees. Shrubs and trees bearing fruit, attractive to birds, are also being grown and transplanted throughout the forest to attract both song and game birds. The state forest has an area of about 3,300 acres. It will be used for demonstrating practical forestry, as a game refuge and recreational center.

Wayne Hummer, president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the fourth district business conference held at Belvidere on March 13, announced the organization of two entirely new departments in the state chamber of commerce. These are the department of finance and the civic development department.

Building permits issued during February in 45 reporting cities of the state authorized 1,215 building projects with an estimated cost of $9,224,080. This valuation represents an increase of 23.9 per cent over the figure for the preceding month but is still 37.7 per cent below the figure for a year ago, according to a report compiled by the bureau of statistics and research, Howard B. Myers, chief of the industrial commission, Illinois department of labor.

A report upon a survey made among local chambers of commerce by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and released under date of March 12 shows that employment in Illinois is between 25 and 40 per cent better than it was a month ago. Though slightly under last year a tremendous increase in various lines of activity is expected to greatly improve the employment situation within the next 30 days.

Six hens made perfect scores during the month of February, at the poultry experimental plants the Illinois department of agriculture operates at Quincy, Kankakee and Murphysboro, according to the report turned in to Director Stuart E. Pierson, by the chief poultryman, E. G. Horner.

Health promotion week for the state of Illinois is the week from April 27 to May 3. This has been so designated by Governor Emmerson through a proclamation and will be observed as such throughout the state under the supervision of Dr. Andy Hall, director of the department of public health for the state of Illinois.

Scarlet fever is at present the most prevalent notifiable disease in the state, says the Illinois Health Messenger, official bulletin of the state department of public health. For the first nine weeks of this year 5,368 cases were reported against 3,652 for the corresponding period of 1929. Weekly reports of fresh cases still range from 500 to 700. Distribution is general throughout the state.

Officials and employees of the state department of agriculture were recently hosts at a party at which Clarence F. Buck, former director of the department, was a guest of honor. Phil S. Haner, superintendent of plant industry, in behalf of members of the department presented Mr. Buck with a watch. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson and Mrs. Emmerson were among the guests and Governor Emmerson made a speech in which he wished Mr. Buck "bon voyage" and welcomed his successor, Stuart E. Pierson.

Registration of passenger automobiles in Illinois on March 15 passed the one million mark, Secretary of State William J. Stratton announced. Last year the sale of passenger car plates did not reach the million mark until April 1.

Employees of the state department of public health honored Dr. Thomas G. Hull, retiring head of the laboratories of the department, with a farewell dinner on Wednesday, March 19. The affair was also in the nature of an anniversary party for Dr. Andy Hall, director of the department, who was appointed a year ago, April 1.

United States Senator Charles S. Deneen, candidate for renomination, addressed a crowd estimated at 3,500 persons at the state arsenal in Springfield on March 18.

Plans for the remodeling of the administration building of the Jacksonville state hospital and the elimination of many fire hazards are now well under way, and work will commence soon. It will be done by contract at an approximate cost of $75,000. The temporary roof has been completed and a large part of the ruins cleared.

Illinois farm reserves of corn, wheat, and rye are somewhat below average and barley above average, the March 1 survey made jointly by the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture shows. This report, A. J. Suratt, agricultural statistician, said, is always of interest to the agricultural public as it indicates the size of grain supplies remaining on farms for seeding, feeding and marketing at the beginning of the planting season.

Production of coal in Illinois shipping mines fell off considerably during February, Director John G. Millhouse of the state department of mines and minerals, has announced. February tonnage was 4,761,825, while the January tonnage was 6,590,275. In February, 1929, a total of 6,509,193 tons were produced. In February, 1930, 49,580 miners worked an average of 15.4 days with six men killed during the month and 1,085 injured to the extent that they lost one or more days' work.

First prize in the Lincoln Essay contest, sponsored by the Abraham Lincoln association of Springfield, has been awarded to Hakei Tojo, a law student at Tokyo Imperial university, Tokyo, Japan. The contest is one conducted each year by the association among Japanese school children and college students. The essays are written in English and judged in Japan. The 30 adjudged best in that country are sent to Springfield and the six best among them selected. To the first three medals are awarded and honorable mention given to the next three. Paul M. Angle, Springfield, is chairman of the judging committee.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has returned to Springfield, after a trip to Washington, D. The state department of conservation has recently taken over two tracts of land to be used for the propagation of upland game birds, principally pheasants and quail. One of these tracts consists of 40 acres within the state fair grounds, recently turned over to the department by the state fair board, of which Representative Homer J. Tice, of Greenview, is chairman. Although considerable improvement work will be necessary before the ground is in shape to carry out the department's projects, Director Ralph F. Bradford states that he will strive to have the major improvements completed before the opening of the state fair in August. The other tract is a farm about five miles south of Mt. Vernon, containing over 700 acres. The fields in this tract have been cultivated and are being seeded to crops which will be used as feed and cover for the birds. The funds required for this extensive work are derived from the sale of hunting licenses and not from direct taxation as is commonly assumed.

Seed Comes From All Over World

Some Plants Require Specialized Skill in Proper Management.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When you open a packet of garden seed in the spring, do you have any idea where the seed came from and who grew it? The stock in any wholesale seed house is likely to represent an assembly of items from many parts of the United States and from foreign countries as well, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Development of Seed.
Temperature, humidity, soil and water supply naturally have an important effect on the development of the seed crop. Some plants require specialized skill and experience in the management of the seedling plants. In other cases a plentiful supply of cheap labor determines the production area. Transportation expense, particularly if it is high, may favor seed production in a certain area. Plant pests and crop diseases may play an important part in ending seed production in one area and stimulating it in another.

Of the common garden seeds, the different varieties of peas form the most important single item. Since 1890 production has moved westward from New York to Idaho, Montana and California. Irrigation is an aid to pea seed growers, but the shift has come principally because growing peas for canning and trucking is usually more profitable than growing for seed, and this has led the pea-growing sections to depend for seed on areas where the canning and trucking business is unimportant.

Similar factors have influenced the westward march of bean seed growing. Nebraska is a principal producer of sweet-corn seed. Rocky Ford, Colo., is the most important production area for muskmelon and cucumber seed. Colorado also produces watermelon seed as do Florida and Texas. A large part of the squash and pumpkin seed comes from the plains of Kansas and Nebraska.

Kitchen Garden Seed.
Seed of the commonest kitchen garden vegetable, radish and lettuce, comes almost entirely from California, as does the bulk of the American production of onion and turnip seed. Some turnip seed comes from abroad when prices are right, and most of the Bermuda onion seed comes from the Canary Islands.

Denmark supplies most of our cauliflower seed and considerable cabbage seed, and foreign supplies of beet, spinach, summer radish, celery and carrot are in sharp and often successful competition with the American supply.

Good Seed Is Essential in Potato Production

"Use of good seed is the first essential in economical potato production."

Advice to potato growers from the horticulture extension specialists of the Ohio State university, lays stress upon this fact. The county agents have been urged to encourage the use of certified seed for this year's crop, by all growers who can obtain this seed.

When the good seed has been obtained, the specialists say, a well-drained field should be chosen in which to plant the potatoes. Fields not naturally drained should be filed.

Fertility of the soil requires an adequate supply of fresh organic matter. Potatoes should follow a green manure crop, in the opinion of the specialists. Very heavy applications of complete chemical fertilizers are not recommended unless other conditions are good. As conditions improve the application of fertilizer may profitably be increased. Complete fertilizers are recommended. As growing conditions are improved, applications may be increased to 1,000 or 1,500 pounds, or even more, per acre; this can profitably be applied in the row where fertilizer and the seed pieces are kept separate, the specialists say. Row applications have been found most effective in increasing yields.

Agricultural Hints

Among the small grains barley is the most satisfactory substitute for corn.

The feeding value of soy bean seed compares favorably with that of other concentrates.

A potato weeder which is liked by growers who have used it was put on the market last season.

In no other crop can 9,000 to 10,000 pounds of rich, palatable dry matter be grown per acre at as low a cost as in corn.

No other crop can be used in so many different ways as can corn. Its grain is the most appetizing of all grains for animals.

Potassium of potash is often used in the water given to turkeys to ward off germs that might get in the water. Unless the permanganate is fresh, it is no good.

Many valuable by-products such as starch, oil, paper, animal feeds, and even substitutes for lumber are made from the corn plant. Its usefulness has not yet been tested to the limit.

REVIEW

GOLDEN TEXT—Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—He Went About Doing Good.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The King Serving.

Since the lessons of the quarter are bound together by the threefold unity of one book, one theme, and one person, the best method of review for young people and adults is to present the book of Matthew as a whole, and each lesson in its relation to Matthew's central purpose. The central theme is Jesus Christ, the King, the fulfiller of the Messianic hope.

Lesson for January 5.
God entered into covenant with David concerning the Kingdom (II Sam. 7:8-16). Christ's genealogy shows His legal right to the throne of David (1:1-17). The Messiah was not only said to be the seed of the woman (Gen. 3:15) and the son of a virgin (Isa. 7:14), but the mighty God (Isa. 9:6). Jesus Christ, the King, was begotten of the Holy Ghost and born of Mary, thus becoming Immanuel (Matt. 1:23, cf. Isa. 7:14).

Lesson for January 12.
The King entered upon His official work by being baptized. Christ's baptism was His act of consecration to the task of saving His people through the sacrifice of Himself upon the cross. Having received the official approval from the open heavens, the King went forth to the wilderness to meet and overcome the devil (Heb. 2:14). His victory demonstrated His ability to accomplish the work of redemption.

Lesson for January 19.
The voice of John the Baptist being stilled, the King becomes His own herald. His message was the same as John's, namely, "the kingdom of heaven at hand," which means the Messianic earth rule of Jesus Christ. He called helpers to His side and went through Galilee preaching with triumphant success.

Lesson for January 26.
This lesson shows the characteristics and responsibilities of the subjects of the kingdom, the beatitudes showing the characteristics, and salt and light the responsibilities. The life and testimony of the disciples are to light up the darkness of the world and preserve it from decay.

Lesson for February 2.
This lesson displays the principles which are to control the lives of the subjects of the kingdom. They should live a life of prayer, putting their trust in the Heavenly Father for temporal blessings. Spiritual affairs are to be first.

Lesson for February 9.
The subjects of the kingdom should be free from censorious judgments, be on the lookout for false teachers, avoid empty profession, and obey the words of Christ, the King.

Lesson for February 16.
In the performance of mighty works the King demonstrated His ability to administer the affairs of the kingdom. He showed His power over the chief foes of mankind—sickness, sin, satanic power, death, sorrow, and storms.

Lesson for February 23.
The kingdom was to be propagated by sending forth twelve men to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Their mission was authenticated by supernatural deeds.

Lesson for March 2.
In the propagation of the kingdom, violent opposition arose, resulting in the plan to kill the King. Opposition will be experienced by all who go forth in Christ's name.

Lesson for March 9.
The parables display the admixture of moral and spiritual conditions in the world between Christ's crucifixion and second coming. The parabolic method of teaching makes clear the truth to those who love it, but conceals it from those who do not.

Lesson for March 16.
The parables of the wheat and tares, mustard seed and leavened meal, show the outward growth and inner decay of the work inaugurated by Christ in the interval between His crucifixion and second coming.

Lesson for March 23.
Though rejected by the nation, the King continued His ministry of healing and teaching.

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon.

CHAPTER II

A Licensed Trader

The diligence from Beja deposited Fellowes at the ferry-landing opposite Lisbon. The river was crowded with shipping, and his heart leaped in his throat at sight of the legend, "True Bounty, New York," printed across the broad stern of a ship. His mind harked overseas, to the sprawling town on the tip of Manhattan island, a little, red-brick town, bowered in tulip trees and chestnuts, that held a year and a half ago, and to the sleepy village he called home, huddled between the pine forests of Long Island and the Great South Bay.

He wondered how an American ship, flying American colors—the Stars and Stripes flaunted proudly from the mizzen yardarm, as if in defiance of the White Ensign displayed by the King's ships—could lie here in the Tagus. How had she gotten in? And more important, how would she get out? A small boat lay alongside her, and as he watched, a bank stooped-shouldered man descended into it. Saul Chater! No wonder he'd been thinking of Babylon. And Chater's presence meant the True Bounty was an Inglepin ship. Ben Inglepin's, of course. Ben had married a Portuguese, and very naturally, specialized in the Peninsula trade. In that, as in everything else, differing from Joshua.

Fellowes chuckled as he remembered the whimsical feud between the brothers. They had been enemies from the day the firm of Inglepin Brothers was dissolved in '33, after Joshua had declared General Washington was plotting to return the country to the British Crown. Joshua believed in Jefferson; Ben cursed him for a demagogue. Joshua considered Washington had been "that libertine, Hamilton's puppet"; Ben all but said his prayers to the General's memory.

The ferry bumped into the quay, and noticing Chater's boat heading for the same landing-steps, Fellowes decided to wait, and speak to the True Bounty's master. Chater was the last American he would have chosen to meet in a foreign land, but the fellow was an American, and what was more, came from Babylon. Fellowes recalled the day the New Englander had appeared in the village, buyer of the farmlands across Sampawam's creek from the Manor. Fellowes' father, whose ancestors had held the Manor since the conquest from the Dutch, insisted the village must give Chater fair treatment.

Fellowes knew his father had come to detest the man, but he, himself, had seen little of Chater. For he had taken to the sea in the hope of replenishing the family fortunes, undetermined by years of ill-paid diplomatic service, and particularly since his father's death, was seldom at home. Now, he reflected, there'd be nothing to lure him from Babylon, unless he could obtain a privateer. All his spare funds had gone in the wreck.

He banished such thoughts, however, as Chater slumped up the landing-steps. It would never do to let the New Englander suspect the extent of his misfortunes. So, proffering his hand, he mustered a cheery smile.

"How are you, Captain Chater?" "Well, well, now," Chater whined nasally. "If 'tain't Lion Fellowes! Last I heard, ye'd sailed for Canton."

"I was wrecked a couple of weeks ago," Fellowes explained. "Driven ashore by a British frigate, south in Algarve."

"That was pesky luck. Ye got to be careful in wartime, Cap'n Fellowes."

"D'you call this careful?"

Fellowes waved toward the British armada that surrounded the True Bounty. Chater cackled derisively. "Ye see, I sail on license. I got me a dockment, all signed and sealed, with Admiral Warren's name on it, licensin' the True Bounty for a voyage to Portugal."

"You mean the British Admiral Warren? Who commands at Halifax?"

"That's him."

"But—but—you're trading with the enemy!"

"Oh, no, we ain't," Chater denied, cackling again. "Portugal's a neutral. And there's a better market for flour and naval stores right here in Lisbon than anywhere else these days."

"Flour for Wellington's army and naval stores for the British fleet," Fellowes commented grimly.

Chater's nutcracker features took on a bilious tinge.

"What's that to me?" he whinnied.

"Or a sight more folks to home? This draught war's ruinin' trade, and 'tain't so popular as the Democrats could wish for."

"There are worse fates than loss of trade to befall a nation," Fellowes returned. "I owe the British for the destruction of my ship, and I can't forget I'm at war with them."

"A b—l of a fine war!" mocked Chater. "What can we do ag'n a hundred and twenty sail of the line?"

"We can fight. We did in '76. When I got home—"

"'Cate'latin' on a passage for Noo Yawk?" Chater interrupted with interest. "I'm lookin' for a mate—jest lost mine with the river-flux. And my second's too young to take his place. Got some of the owner's family aft. Make it with yer while, Cap'n Fellowes."

"Thank you, but I'd prefer not," Fellowes declined. "Can you tell me where the American consul has his office?"

"A sight of good he'll do ye," jeered Chater. And with a touch of irritation: "Hornswoggle me, if I can see haow ye reason things out. If any feller oughter be Federalist, ye'd oughter be. Wasn't ye born in London? Didn't yer pa send ye to school in England?"

"But I Ain't Got Time to Stand Gormin' Here, With a New Mate to Find, and Sailin' Tomorrer."

"That why I'm a Democrat, and a believer in American trade rights," Fellowes replied good naturedly. "It wasn't my fault my father happened to be consul in London, or that I was at Eton."

"Well, naow, I'd say ye ain't made the most of it," gloomed Chater. "But I ain't got time to stand gormin' here, with a new mate to find, and sailin' tomorrer."

More discouraged than he liked to admit, Fellowes watched the drab figure of the True Bounty's master slouch away through the gaudy throng of mariners on the quay.

Dispiritedly, without any conscious purpose, he suffered himself to drift in the tide of humanity that swirled along the quays, and presently emerged in Black Horse square, center of state and military activities. Over one of the palaces waved the Cross of St. George. A loquacious sergeant informed him Lord Wellington was down from the front in Spain, and for want of something else to do, Fellowes loitered, curious to see the Englishman who had bested Napoleon's bravest marshals.

A knot of officers emerged from the doorway, a flutter of feminine garments in their midst. Fellowes stood paralyzed with astonishment as he recognized a hulking black specter of a woman. The duenna! And behind two glittering aides, leaning on the arm of a lean-beaked officer in undress uniform, his rescuer, herself. She looked lovelier than ever, her oval face framed in the folds of the mantilla, her eyes upcast gravely to meet the gaze of her escort. No ordinary jockey of the Staff, this man, his voice, curt as a drillmaster's, carrying to where Fellowes stood.

"—get your people lined up, ma'am," he was saying. "Ministers are cordial, but they'll require a definite position, d'ye see? No sense in this American war. We've got troubles enough without it. 'Sure there's nothing else we can do for you?'"

"Oh, yes, my lord. 'Tis for us to do, now, though I fear 'twill take a year, at the least."

"Can't be helped," he returned brusquely. "Worth waiting for, if you pull it off." He saluted mechanically. "Servant, ma'am. Remember me to your father."

In the crowd Fellowes lost sight of the two women, and several minutes passed before he could elude the sentries and pursue them. He had forgotten his immediate troubles. His one concern was to speak to this mysterious girl.

Despite his efforts, he failed to overtake his quarry until they were entering Lahmeyer's hotel, in the Lago da Suo Paulo.

"Ma'am! Oh, ma'am," he panted desperately. "May I speak with you?"

And he flushed at the inanity of his address, conscious of the travel-stains acquired in the long journey by diligence, and the abominable fit of the clothes he had bought in Beja to replace the shrunken garments in which he had been washed ashore.

The girl in the golden-yellow cloak stared at him blankly, then, as his identity dawned upon her, a slow smile spread across the smooth olive of her features.

"'Tis our American sailor! But, sir, you have no right to be here. I bade Padre Antonio keep you all of a week."

"I left against his urgency," Fellowes answered, the friendly reproof putting him at his ease. "But there was no need for me to linger—my carcass is a tough one."

"That we may allow, sir. Yet, still, you were rash to come to Lisbon. If the British Secret Service fail to arrest you, there are the press-gangs. We must take thought to this." Her brow puckered. "If you'd tell me who you are—"

A familiar nasal voice interrupted her.

"Well, well, naow! I didn't figger on ye fixin' to git me a new mate, Miss Cara. But 'tain't no use—least-ways be turned me daown."

Fellowes eyed Chater with a distaste as pronounced as his bewilderment at the discovery of a connection between his rescuer and the master of the True Bounty, but the girl cried eagerly:

"Do you know this gentleman, Captain Chater?"

"'Calc'late I do," drawled Chater. "Make ye acquainted with Cap'n Lion Fellowes. Neighbor of mine, home to Babylon."

"How fortunate," she exclaimed. "This is the first time I've seen Captain Chater since we came north, so he hasn't heard of our meeting at Perenna, Captain Fellowes. And I didn't know, then, that Mr. Penner, his mate, had died. But if I had—"

she hesitated—"I couldn't offer a strange American passage in the True Bounty."

"What have you to do with the True Bounty?" asked Fellowes. "I thought you English."

She laughed.

"I'm Cara Inglepin. You must know my father, if you are from New York, but I have been little in America—especially since my mother died, for my grandfather, the old Marques, was falling, and he would have me by him, wherever he went. And now that he is dead—" her voice sobered—"there are reasons I must fly home as fast as I may."

"Do you sail on the True Bounty?" "By tomorrow's tide, nor may we wait. So if you'd pocket your pride, and step down a rank for the voyage, 'twould serve me beyond measure, sir."

The frankness of her appeal flattered him, but he looked uncomfortably at Chater, who snickered:

"Heh! Heh! He daon't hold with sailin' on license, Miss Cara. A rabid Democrat, and him brought up in England!"

"Sanctissma!" Miss Inglepin bit her lip. "I might have remembered you preferred shipwreck to yieldin' to an English frigate. But this is foolishness, sir. You are not like to reach home, save it be in a licensed ship. No privateer or letter-of-marque will touch at a Peninsula port."

Scienitsts Not Agreed as to Color of Moon

The moon is not white, it is brown; Mars is not red, it is green! These are the latest suggestions of astronomers. A committee of the Carnegie institution, in Washington, reports that the apparent silvery whiteness of moonlight is due to contrast with the darkened sky. The actual color of the moon, they believe, is the dull brown of weathered rocks. This suggests that the surface of the satellite may have been weathered by oxidation at some previous time, although the moon is known to have no atmosphere now.

Mars, according to E. J. Gounod of the Amateur Astronomers' association, may be covered with green vegetation like the earth. The reason it appears red, he says, is that the light rays have to pass through the atmosphere of both Mars and the earth before they reach our eyes. These atmospheres filter out the blue and green rays but allow the red rays to pass. The three reasons most often given for the red color of Mars, says Popular Science Monthly, are that the planet is "rusty" with iron rust, that its soil and rocks are red or that it is red vegetation.

BROWN ROT HURTS IN PEACH ORCHARD

Is Common Disease; Spreads Rapidly Among Fruit.

A good set of fruit in the peach orchard may be made worthless in a short while by inroads of brown rot and scab, two serious fungus diseases. "Peach brown rot is a common disease and produces a brown decay of the peach that spreads rapidly throughout the fruit tissues," explains G. W. Fant, plant disease specialist at the North Carolina State college. "In a few days the entire peach may become rotten and the disease causes heavy losses in poorly sprayed or unsprayed orchards. The brown rot spores spread the disease from affected fruits to healthy ones so that when conditions are favorable a large part of the crop may soon become affected."

Mr. Fant states that peach scab is also a common disease which is confined to the surface of the fruit. It frequently results in a drying and cracking of the fruit tissue under the affected area. In severe cases, where cracking occurs, the fruit is rendered worthless.

But both of these troubles may be controlled effectively by the application of suitable spray materials at the proper time. Ordinarily the peach becomes subject to brown rot and scab several weeks before ripening time. Spray applications coming about four weeks after the petals have fallen and again about four weeks before each variety is due to ripen will prevent the trouble. For these sprays the recently developed dry-mix sulphur lime or the older self-boiled lime sulphur may be used. Mr. Fant states that the spray should be so applied as to reach all parts of the fruit.

It is profitable to collect and destroy the brown rot mummies during the fall and winter as an additional control measure. At this season, however, spraying is of greatest importance and is essential where sound fruit is desired.

Time to Be Thinking of Good Program for Spray

Apple trees should be given their first spraying when the first flower buds show pink, the second spray as soon as the petals drop from the flowers and before the calyx closes, and the third the last week of June or the first week of July. The spray material should be made up in the proportions of one and a half pounds of arsenate of lead (powdered), five quarts of commercial lime-sulphur if liquid or four pounds if dry, and 50 gallons of water. If the apple maggot is troublesome, other sprays should be given about July 20 and August 6.

The same spray should be used for plums, with applications just before the blossoms open, just after the petals fall, when the plums are the size of small peas, and when the fruit first starts to color. If lice appear on apples, plums, or on plants in early spring, as the buds are bursting, spray with nicotine sulphate, 40 per cent, one-half pint; soap of any kind, two to three pounds, and 50 gallons of water.

Check Up on Condition of Valuable Spray Rig

Check up on the condition of the spray. See that the tank does not leak and that all joints and fittings are tight and not leaky. Flush the pump, rod and nozzles with clean water. Examine the hose for weak spots and rotten connection. Be sure that all valves are working properly and that the pump will maintain its maximum pressure when operated at the normal speed. Good spraying weather is valuable and any time lost by having to tinker with the sprayer, once the work is begun, will help make the farm balance appear in red letters.

Kerosene Emulsion Very Easy to Put Together

To make a supply of kerosene emulsion you will need a pail, a small spray pump, and a place to heat water. The emulsion is easily made by following these directions:

Heat one-half gallon of water to boiling. Slice half a bar of soap into pieces and stir it in the water until dissolved. Take it from the fire and pour this hot soapsuds into a pail into which you have put a gallon of kerosene. Then pump the mixture back and forth into the pail until the kerosene is thoroughly mixed with the soapsuds, forming an emulsion.

Transplant Currants

Currant bushes should be transplanted to their new location next spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the new location can be prepared. If they are old clumps, with the crown 18 inches or more in diameter, you could dig them and separate each clump into three or four new ones.

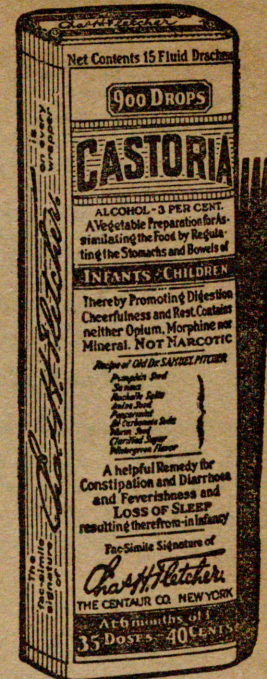

This would interfere somewhat with the crop for the first year or so, but would increase your planting by a considerable number.

TINLEY GARDEN CLUB NOTES

The "Little Garden" class also has brought out a large entry list, even more clubs desiring to compete than could be given space. Those gardens will each occupy a space about 8 by 10 feet.

The twelve full size gardens in the special open class are being constructed by commercial and private growers competing for the grand prize. Chicago parks, Forest Preserve and other large gardens also will be on the main floor of the Stadium, but will not be in competition with the exhibits of the three Park Boards or the Forest Preserve. Also the Central States Garden and Flower Show will not be opened until April 5th actual work of preparing the Stadium for it is already under way as the entire interior of the huge building, where hockey and boxing hold sway during the winter months, must be practically rebuilt for the gardeners.

The Chicago Stadium where the Central States Garden and Flower Show will be held, is located in the 1800 block of Madison Street, that is bounded on the east by Wood St. and on the west by Lincoln St. Washington Blvd. is the principal traffic lane for automobiles.

Elevated lines: All north and south side lines connect on downtown Loop with Humboldt Park and Logan Square trains, which bring you to station at Madison and Paulina Streets, one block east of the Stadium. Passengers from the Douglas Park and Garfield Park elevated trains and Chicago, Aurora Elgin Ry., change at Marshallfield station to Humboldt Park and Logan Square trains.

Surface Lines—Madison Street cars to Stadium door. Transfers from all cross-town lines.

Buses: Washington Blvd. from downtown or west side of city to door. Ample parking space for private cars at and about the Stadium.

"Garden Topics in relation to the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs" will be broadcast by Mrs. Wallace B. Combs of Tinley Park 3rd district chairman of gardens on Wednesday April 2nd at 2:30 p. m. over WGN.

TINLEY PARK

Tinley Park, at least, will get no increased school or village taxes, no matter how the assessment is juggled. School district 146 cut its rate from $2 to 50c per hundred, sufficient to bring in the $11,000 that is ordinarily used for the school. The village ordinance calls for a levy that will bring in just $2500. In those districts where the rate has not been changed to balance with the new valuations the school and the village taxes will be more than doubled.

According to figures published Bremen township's has been raised about 125 per cent, while other townships nearby range from 60 per cent up. According to the assessor some parcels are valued too low, others have been increased 300 percent or more.

The Bremen Township Republican Club went on record Friday night as supporting Deneen candidates, plus John W. Jaranowski. Among the local endorsements were Otto Ziebell for president of the school board, Mathew T. Roberts for member of school board, and Wm. H. Wallace for clerk of Robins.

IRENE RESTING UP FOR HOLLYWOOD

Sleep is especially necessary after the hard work of the theatre. Miss Irene Delroy, the vivacious star of "Top Speed," one of the season's hits on Broadway is shown about to take a restful trip to slumberland on the Steamship Beautyrest. Singing alone is considered tiring but when dancing and acting are added, the work of a musical comedy star becomes strenuous enough to be classed with the hardest jobs of working men. In a first rate show, this is not limited to the eight performances a week but is augmented by many long hours of rehearsal. Miss Delroy is wearing the latest mode in pajamas, a lounging ensemble in cocoa brown rayon jersey banded in orange and fashioned with a tuck-in, sleeveless blouse of orange rayon jersey. This smart little costume for leisure hours has adopted the higher waist line and the hip sash. Simplicity of design is relieved by the novel motif which trims the front of the blouse; and by the smartness of the color combination. Experience in the theatre with costumes has made Miss Delroy careful in her choice of fabrics for long wear and frequent washing. Clothes never get such hard wear as theatrical costumes, which, while they must be dainty and fresh at all times, undergo the most exacting wear; they are subject to dirt and grease paint, necessitating frequent cleaning and washing and mending. Her charming bedroom shown above with pale green and pink rayon drapes and bed-spreads forms a fitting background for the lovely Miss Delroy and her dainty garments. Broadway is about to lose this leading lady as she will soon depart for the West Coast to star in talking pictures, the first of which will be "See Naples and Die."

"I am for the candidate who has the most money"

EDITOR ELMHURST PRESS

By LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL

"One of the interesting phases of the present campaign is the ardor with which certain DuPage county papers have taken up the cause of Mrs. O'Neill's opponent."

"During an interview with Mrs. O'Neill, she disclosed that at some time early in the campaign she had a conversation with the editor of the Elmhurst Press at which time he frankly told her that in making his choice of candidates he was guided entirely by property qualifications. In other words, he said, 'I AM FOR THE CANDIDATE WHO HAS THE MOST MONEY.'"

"It would of course be evident then that his choice must be Richard J. Barr, the member of the legislature who has been so eager to meet the editor's requirements that he has become involved in the notorious Sanitary District payroll scandal and has earned the ill will of the Legislative Voters League because of his too ardent support of special interests while a legislator. In their zeal to serve their candidates THE ELMHURST PRESS AND ALLIED NEWSPAPERS have even gone to the extent of using the old familiar SMALL REGIME TACTICS and are endeavoring to sell their man on the "hard roads" slogan—in this in face of the fact that Governor Emmerson said recently in his speech at the annual meeting of highway engineers: "Roads must be built strictly on a business basis without regard to political expectations." —Lombard Spectator.
